Idaho's Dog Derby

Although airplanes are fast supplanting sled dogs in Alaska and the Yukon, they can never completely replace the animals which have had such a large part in developing and making the Far North accessible. To keep alive the traditions established by the malamutes and huskies in opening snowy wilderneses even within continental United States, the city of Ashton, Idaho, holds an annual American dog derby. This event attracts thousands of visitors from surrounding states, Canada and Alaska, including many former sourdoughs and trappers who experience a touch of nostalgia as they watch the 25-mile race and listen to the accompanying cries of "Mush on," "Gee," and "Haw" as the drivers urge their stout-hearted charges on. Three times the dogs circle the eight and one-third mile course leading through the center of the public auditorium, over windswept ice and through waist-deep snow.

Remodeling the Attic

A remodeled and modernized attic affords one of the best solutions to the old problem of providing another room for a growing family with a small income. Unfinished or unused attics can usually be converted into complete livable rooms. Insulating the board is one of the many materials that may be used for an economical, neat and quick remodeling job on the attic. Requiring no painting, papering, or finishing, insulating board keeps the room warm in the winter and cool in the summer. Scrubbing or scraping, followed by a couple of coats of shellac, will make the floor look like new. When finished, the family has a modern room, adequate and comfortable, to be used either as a room for a growing child or as a cozy den or study and relaxation or a particularly suitable playroom.

Brutal Sealers

Seal "pirates" who operated around the Pribilof islands for two years after the United States purchased Alaska from Russia, were so cruel that they often skinned the animals alive. In their hurry to slaughter, they often only stunned the animals with clubs, then skinned them before they recovered consciousness. These pirates were soon put out of business when the United States government leased the sealing rights to independent companies, according to the American Wildlife Institute.

Bright Outlook For This Year's Graduates

Richmond, May 8.- (By VPA).- Virginians, especially those who will graduate from the various colleges in the nation in a few weeks, are heartened by the report that jobs are multiplying for American college graduates this year, due in considerable part to war-stimulated industry. University of Virginia, Washington and Lee and Virginia Polytechic Institute report encouraging offers being made to their graduates.

Increased employment calls, higher starting salaries and prospects of jobs absorbing "100 per cent of our graduates by fall" was reported by the university. Engineering students were particularly in demand, officials said. Business students ran a close second. Where starting salaries last year averaged $100 a month the university reports its students this year have been offered an average of $125.

Washington and Lee reported that no far employment demand is running about the same, with similar starting salaries. No calls are in selling work." Virginia Tech announced employment demand was running about the same, as are starting salaries. The Blacksburg officials indicated that harvest demand was for sales work and engineering, and mechanical lines of the two. Prospects are for placement of at least 95 per cent of the graduates by the end of the year, they said.

Students Ask School Aid

Wednesday morning a delegation of students from the Appomattox high school appeared before the county supervisors requesting a full nine month school term both this session and next session.

The question of the school budget for next session has been before the school and county authorities for several weeks. Due to increased demands by the state for the conduct of the school program and at the same a cut in certain state school funds, many Virginia counties are facing a grave problem in balancing their school budgets. The problem is more or less statewide, and not confined to Appomattox county. In the past few days unique rumors have been heard here ranging all the way to the statement that there may be no high schools in the county next session. It is felt that some happy solution to the problem may be reached, however and that panicky rumors will not aid the situation. The most logical solution to the budget problem seems to be to for a special session of the general assembly to be called and do one of two things: provide funds to aid the counties' school program out of the anticipated $1,500,000 surplus, or else authorize the counties to put their own budgets in balance without adherence to present rigid state requirements.

Most citizens of the county will have confidence in the able officials serving on the board of supervisors and school board and supervisors dent to arrange the matter for the best interest of the county

Senator Byrd To Have No Opposition

United States Senator Harry F. Byrd will be renominated by the August Democratic primary without opposition, yesterday being the last day to file notice of candidacy and Senator Byrd being the only Democrat to pay the required entrance fee to the state treasurer.

Candidates for the House of Representatives have thirty days more in which to file. However, it is not expected that there will be opposition, to the renomination of Congressman Patrick Henry Drewry, of the Fourth District.

Senator Byrd has paid his fee of $200, or 2 per cent of his annual salary and filed notice of his candidacy with J. Murray Hooker, chairman of the State Central Democratic Committee.

It was learned that about 60,000 Virginia voters signed petitions asking Senator Byrd to be a candidate. At least 250 signatures are required.

Congressmen A. Willis Robertson and S. Otis Bland have already paid their fees and the other seven incumbents have ample time before the congressional deadline.

Thus it appears that the talk of a duel for the Senatorship between the organization of Senator Byrd and followers of Governor Price was not grounded and failed to materialize.

Buckingham For Byrd

A mass meeting of Buckingham county Democrats was held Monday to elect delegates to the state convention. By a unanimous vote, the meeting adopted a resolution endorsing Senator Harry Flood Byrd for President. T. B.
